BRIDGE

the whole world is our home.
the riches and luxury,
as well as
the poverty and suffering.

no matter the geography,
you’re never far from home.

the earth, with its mountains,
trees, and great oceans,
contains us all.
each of our mundane lives and
our everyday routines

the oracles of time that stand silently waiting to be discovered by those willing to break free from the mundane, even for just a moment, to tell the secrets of life and stories long forgotten.

generation after generation,
they stood.
and generation after generation
they have been observed.

each person, from every walk of life, came to listen to their wisdom
and each person had all come to the same conclusion:

“the whole world is our home.
the riches and luxury,
as well as
the poverty and suffering.”

thank you for everything.
